FRANCESCO LAMPERTI

PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS
— SCUOLA SUPERIORE SANT'ANNA

13 November 2025
5:00 - 6:30 PM (CET)

Join us to deepen your understanding of the intricate ties between climate and the economy—past, present, and future.

This webinar explores the complex, two-way relationship between economic systems and the climate. It will look at how human activities have influenced the climate, with a focus on international efforts to limit global warming to well below 2°C. It will also examine how climate change has affected—and will continue to affect—economic systems worldwide, highlighting approaches consistent with EU strategies for sustainable and climate-resilient economies. The session will conclude with insights into how economic policies as well as simple socio-economic decisions can contribute to climate solutions.
