Engaging Hearts and Minds for a Sustainable Future

MANUELA KELLY CALZINI

19 February 2026
5:00 - 7:30 PM (CET)

Join us to deepen your understanding of how stories can turn complex issues like climate change into meaningful, relatable learning experiences.

This webinar explores storytelling as one of humanity's oldest and most powerful tools for expression, connection, and meaning-making. Building on recent pedagogical projects, it highlights how stories nurture creativity, intercultural understanding, and learner agency across diverse classrooms.

Responding to a challenge widely recognised in EU climate and youth policy – how to engage young people meaningfully in green transition – the webinar demonstrates how narrative can make complex ecological issues tangible through character-driven stories, imagined futures, and folk traditions. Participants will explore practical techniques that integrate drama, performance, and sustainability, equipping them to engage students not only as learners, but as active participants in climate action.
